Why Ireland?

Ireland has consistently been ranked as one of the best countries in the world for business. Ireland has succeeded in attracting some of the world's largest financial institutions and companies to establish operations here. This includes some of the largest firms in the global technology, pharmaceutical, biosciences, manufacturing and financial services industries.

They are in Ireland because:

-  Benefits of EU membership and the only English speaking jurisdiction in the EU
-  Regulatory, economic and people infrastructure of a highly-developed OECD jurisdiction
-  Low corporate tax rate of 12.5% as part of a competitive tax infrastructure. An extensive and expanding double tax treaty network. Provision of research and development tax credit
-  A common law jurisdiction and a legal system that is similar to that of the US
-  Pro-active government approach to foreign direct investment and a strong, long-standing relationship with the US

"Held in high esteem by clients and peers, Matheson is the first choice for many US and EU multinationals, investment banks and financial institutions."

World Tax

"Offering capacity on both US coasts as well as in cross-border transactions, the firm regularly counsels US clients on Irish corporate tax issues, including investment, operational and compliance matters."

Tax: Chambers Global

Our experience, together with research carried out by the Economist Intelligence Unit on behalf of our firm, indicates that it is the unique combination of these factors, and not one specific element, which attracts investment to Ireland. While other countries may be competitive in some of the areas highlighted above, Ireland's ability to create a compelling suite of both tangible factors (such as taxation and the legal and regulatory framework) and more intangible elements (such as a "can do" attitude to business) is generally cited as central to its ability to attract investment over other EU countries.
